1. Some things that wear the shapes of men Have never known their place; They
2. They boast the right to rule the world, And claim the crown and throne, And
3. The rank conceit these wise ones show, Concerning who should rule Makes think that God has given them All wisdom, power and grace;

hold that justice is a myth And righteousness unknown.
each and every one of them A madman or a fool.

All wisdom, power, and grace alone, All known, alas! And righteousness unknown; They
And righteousness unknown; They
A madman or a fool; Makes

claim that justice is a myth And righteousness unknown.
each and every one of them A madman or a fool.
